ENCYCLOPAEDIA

Two Notable

As has already been announced to the trade catalogue with our own brings to us a Orders for all books in the very important

Gertrude Atherton

The Gorgeous Isle

A tropical love story of extravagant splendor by an author whose books are always welcomed with enthusiasm. Uniform with Tarkington's "His Own People" and Maurice Hewlett's "The Spanish Jade" in the "Little Novel Series." Remarkable illustrations in color by C. C. Phillips. Special net, 90 cents. (Postage 10 cents.)

Mary Stewart Cutting

The Wayfarers

Mrs. Cutting's successful novel, depicting with fine sympathy, an intimate side of American life, has more than fulfilled the highest expectations of the admirers of her shorter suburban stories.

Illustrations. Fifth Edition. $1.50

Also by Mrs. Cutting:

LITTLE STORIES OF MARRIED LIFE $1.25
THE SUBURBAN WHIRL $1.25
LITTLE STORIES OF COURTSHIP $1.25
MORE STORIES OF MARRIED LIFE $1.25

Booth Tarkington

The Guest of Quesnay

Not since Beaucaire has Mr. Tarkington done anything that savors of the grace, fragrance and the dreaming exquisiteness of this romance.

Frontispiece in colors and illustrations. $1.50

Also by Mr. Tarkington:

MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE $1.25
THE TWO VANREVELS $1.50
THE GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA $1.50

A. Conan Doyle

Round the Fire Stories

A full-sized volume of short stories by this very great writer representing the best of his recent literary output.

Frontispiece. $1.50

THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES $1.50
THE GREEN FLAG $1.50 THE CROXLEY MASTER 50 cts.
THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES $1.25

Reminiscences of Carl Schurz Volume Three

With the publication of the third volume of the Schurz memoirs has been completed one of the most noble lives lived on American soil. From the voluminous notes which General Schurz left at his death, the historian, Frederic Bancroft, and William A. Dunning, have brought the work to a successful conclusion from Grant's administration, their admirable biography of Carl Schurz's later achievements occupying probably one-half of Volume Three.

Volume 3, fully illustrated. Net, $3.00 (postpaid, $3.25). The set, 3 vols., net, $9.00 (postpaid, $9.70)

Recent Fiction

The Gentle Gaffer

By O. Henry

A new book of western stories by this unapproachable humorist and short-story writer. There is but one O. Henry. $1.00.

Also by O. Henry:

THE FOUR MILLION $1.00 THE TRIMMED LAMP $1.00
CABBAGES AND KINGS $1.50
THE VOICE OF THE CITY $1.00
HEART OF THE WEST $1.50

The Distributors

By Anthony Partridge

An ingenious and attractive novel satirizing the frantic attempts of society to escape ennui—by an author of whom we shall hear more. $1.50.

Weeping Cross

By Henry L. Stuart

A powerful story of a Jesuit cavalier's slavery in Puritan New England, pictured with a vividness that is startling.

Net, $1.40 (postage 14c.)

The Point of Honor

By Joseph Conrad

An episode of the Napoleonic wars by the foremost of the younger English writers. "Full of delicate touches and having a fine, distilled irony. Mr. Conrad has done nothing that shows greater insight and skill." (Baltimore News.)

Four illustrations in color. $1.25

Also by Joseph Conrad:

ROMANCE $1.50 YOUTH $1.50
LORD JIM $1.50 FALK $1.50

Lynch's Daughter

By Leonard Merrick

A delightful novel of love versus "tainted millions," by an author "than whom we can boast of no better," William Dean Howells has said. Illustrations. $1.50

That Pup

By Ellis Parker Butler

The author of "Pigs is Pigs" has made another "ten-strike" with this comic skit. Nothing so uproariously funny has appeared since "Pigs is Pigs" as the mishaps of Murchison's much-pedigreed pup Fluff. Illustrations. 50 cents.

Doubleday, Page & Company

the consolidation of the McClure Company's most attractive list of authors and books. McClure list should hereafter be sent to us.

Stewart Edward White

The Riverman

Out of the bracing, rugged atmosphere of the Northwest timber-lands Mr. White has woven a story of manly deeds that tingles with its fine virile emotion and sets the pulses leaping with the thrill of its action. (The successor to "The Blazed Trail.")
Fourth Edition. Fourteen illustrations. $1.50

Also by Mr. White:

ARIZONA NIGHTS $1.50	THE BLAZED TRAIL $1.50
THE SILENT PLACES $1.50

THE CLAIM JUMPERS $1.50
THE MOUNTAINS Net $1.60	THE FOREST Net $1.60

Anthony Hope

The Great Miss Driver

Mr. Hope's admirable novel deals with one of the most remarkable heroines in fiction. The story is thoroughly worthy of the author of Zenda. "Anthony Hope has at last written a novel that might be called great." (Rochester Post Express.)
Illustrations. $1.50

Also by Anthony Hope:

LOVE'S LOGIC $1.25	HELENA'S PATH $1.25
DOUBLE HARNESS $1.50	TRISTRAM OF BLEN $1.50

Ellen Terry's The Story of My Life

So intimate and charming an addition to biographical literature as Ellen Terry's memoirs has not appeared in years. They are the recollections, written with refreshing simplicity and candor, of one of the best known and best loved characters on the stage, the intimate associate of such men and women as Henry Irving, Eleanor Duse, Bernhardt, Whistler, Sargent, Burne-Jones, of Tennyson and Rossetti, Browning and Charles Reade.

Illustrations reproduced from rare portraits and famous paintings. Net $3.50 (postage 25 cents)

NOTES IN SEASON.

LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD Co. announce that the date of publication of the important metaphysical book, "Steps Along the Path," by Katharine H. Newcomb, author of "Helps to Right Living," has been postponed until Monday, February 1, 1909.

B. W. HUEBSCH has just ready in the Art of Life series a little volume by William De Witt Hyde entitled "Self-Measurement." The book, as already noted by us, aims to have a pre-eminently practical value and is based on the idea that an estimate of a man can be conducted scientifically. What the author calls "a scale of human values" is given, together with directions for their personal application.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just brought out a work on "Motor Car Mechanism and Management," by W. Pounter Adams; "A Manual of Oil Motors and Their Uses," by G. Lieckfeld; "A Text-Book of Theodolite Surveying and Levelling," by James Park; also, an important book by Dr. Charles P. Emerson, on the "Essentials of Medicine," which is a text-book for nurses, a primer for medical students, and a reference book for teachers of physiology in public schools in one.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON have just ready a new volume of sermons by Dr. Donald Sage Mackay, entitled "The Religion of the Threshold," with an introduction by Professor Hugh Black, D.D. Dr. Mackay's preaching was full of shrewd and fearless judgments from a man who looked broadly and deeply at life as it is seen in a great city, and his sermons were practical in the best sense, seeking ever to bring religion into contact with life and with the whole of life. The volume, which has been printed with extreme care, should make a fitting gift at this time of the year to any contemplative person.

THE CENTRE PUBLISHING Co., 1451 Broadway, New York City, have published the first number of the first volume of "Psychotherapy: a Course of Reading in Sound Psychology, Sound Medicine, and Sound Religion." The aim of this publication is to present the various phases and aspects of psychotherapy, (the attempt to help the sick through mental, moral and spiritual methods,) in the most authoritative and readable form from the pens of scientists, clergymen and philosophers. The physiological, religious and historical divisions of the subject will be treated as adequately as possible. There is a movement now on foot in America to put psychotherapy to effective use, and further knowledge of the results of the union of religion, medicine and psychology for this purpose is at once a duty and a privilege. Christian Science, Faith Cure, New Thought and the Emmanuel Movement are methods in psychotherapy, itself as old as the beginnings of medicine. The present course of reading will be issued in twelve monthly parts in large quarto shape, with 88 pages to each part. It will be illustrated with portraits of distinguished contributors to its various sections of physiology, psychology, history, etc. The parts will be issued at irregular intervals, but twelve will appear within a year, and the whole work will be complete in four volumes. The present number contains contributions from Prof. James J. Putnam, of Harvard, Dr. L. W. Batten, Prof. James R. Angell, of Chicago University, Dr. Richard C. Cabot, of Boston, and Dr. Frederick Simpson, of Hartford. The editor is W. B. Parker, well known as an earnest student of psychotherapy.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

 The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A. Augustus; B. Benjamin; C. Charles; D. David; E. Edward; F. Frederick; G. George; H. Henry; I. Isaac; J. John; L. Louis; N. Nicholas; P. Peter; R. Richard; S. Samuel; T. Thomas; W. William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Budgett, J: S: The work of John Samuel Budgett: being a collection of his zoological papers, together with a biographical sketch by A. E. Shipley, and contributions by R: Assheton, E: J. Bliss, E: T. Browne, J. Hubert Budgett and J. Graham Kerr; ed. by J. Graham Kerr. [N. Y., Putnam,] 1907, [1908.] 10+494 p. por. pls. F. cl., *$7 net.

A volume which adds distinctly to our knowledge of embryology. Mr. Budgett was an Englishman born at Bristol, 1872. He was a martyr to science. He made three unsuccessful trips into the heart of Africa in his untiring search for the eggs of pelypteris and at last discovered them and watched the development of this most interesting animal. But shortly after he had completed a series of drawings of the external changes in the development of the eggs he was seized with a fatal attack of malaria and fever. The eggs and embryo secured under these circumstances have been carefully studied by Prof. Kerr and the results are presented in this volume.

Cheyney, E. Potts. Readings in English history drawn from the original sources, intended to illustrate "A short history of England." Bost., Ginn, [1908.] c. 36+781 p. D. cl., $1.80.

The compiler is professor of European history in the University of Pennsylvania. This book of readings, drawn from the original sources of English history, is intended to accompany the compiler's "Short history of England" as a book for further study and illustration of its subject. It corresponds chapter by chapter and, in most cases, subject by subject, to that text-book, and is of about the same length. Short introductions and explanatory side-headings have been used in connection with the various extracts, to point out their significance and to connect them with the narrative in the text-book.

Transcript of the Turin manuscript of the "Dodekapropheton," together with the "Apparatus Criticus," has been reprinted from the Journal of Theological Studies, vols. 6, 7, 8. Codex Y is the earliest known manuscript of the "Dodekapropheton" in the Lucianic recension of the Septuagint. Lucian's work embodies renderings not found in other mss. of Septuagint which presupposes a Hebrew original superior in these renderings to the existing Massoretic text. Owing to agreement between many Lucianic readings and the Old Latin Version it has been found advisable to incorporate readings from this Version in the "Apparatus Criticus."

Corbion, W. Amelius, and Grimsdale, G. E. Salesmanship: a practical guide for shop assistant, commercial traveller, and agent. [N. Y., Isaac Pitman & Sons, 1908.] 157 p. D. cl., $1.

This is a book for the salesman in the shop or warehouse, for the town traveller, for the commercial traveller "on the road," and, in a word, for all who have anything to sell. The authors deal at length with the influence of character on salesmanship, the relation of the salesman to the buyer, the knowledge and care of stock, suggestive salesmanship, the avoidance or rectification of mistakes, system, etc. The positive lessons for the guidance of the salesman are illustrated by concrete examples of actual cases which have come under the authors' observation.

Aims to give an analysis of the history and present day conditions of the Latin-American republics: South America, Central America and Mexico. Crichfield has had a prolonged experience in South America as a railroad builder, and from this experience he has arrived at certain conclusions in the light of which he indicates the line of policy which, as he sees it, should govern the future relations existing between the United States and our Latin-American neighbors. Gives a startling picture of the low tone of morals in some quarters. The Monroe doctrine and the political questions it has brought out are made clear. Table of authorities (1 p.).

The author's aim is to give clear statement to the teaching of Holy Scripture regarding the Christian doctrine of salvation. Long years of painstaking study of the Bible and reflection on religious truth have enabled him to speak with originality and independence in scriptural interpretation, while at the same time a knowledge of the methods and conclusions of theologians is evidenced. The book is written in a reverent spirit.

A romantic love story by the author of "Ships that pass in the night." Harriet Rivers, a very attractive woman and an exceptionally fine musician, who has been divorced from a most undesirable husband, is deeply loved by Captain Bending, a famous Arctic explorer. She lives in a charming London house with her companion, Margaret Tressider, who also finds a sincere admirer in Dr. Edgar, a physician of high repute. There are few intense incidents, the title indicating the main purpose of the story—the influence that one character has upon another and the effect that such influence has on the actual happenings of life. The problems of woman suffrage and of woman activities in general are brought into the story.

The chief object of this volume is to place before the connoisseur—the author uses the word in its widest sense—a historical account of the art of miniature which shall be suggestive and stimulating to further study and appreciation, rather than an exhaustive catalogue or an authoritative guide for the specialist. In the illustrations, which are an especial feature, will be recognized at once the value of color. Another important feature of the illustrations is the fact that all the reproductions are produced exactly the same size as the original miniatures. Bibliography (6 p.).

dian Rockies" in size, type and general appearance. In this volume he tells the story of an expedition which he and a party of friends made from Tucson, Arizona, across the desert to the hitherto unknown region surrounding Pinacate in northwestern Mexico. As a narrative of unique experiences in the trackless desert of southern Arizona and in the rugged and uncharted mountains of northwestern Mexico, the book will appeal to all lovers of the free out-of-door life. The marvellous varieties of animal and plant life encountered, the adventures of the party in the pursuit of big game, give the book a rare quality.

A document much discussed of late years and it was thought well to print the documents in the Inner Temple Library and in Corpus Christi College Library, Oxford. The first manuscript is a draft copy: 1, Notes on Royal injunctions; 2, On Prayer-book; 3, On burial; 4, On matrimony; 5, On collation of benefices; 6, Latin articles of religion; 7, Injunctions for deacons and readers. The second manuscript is "Declarations, injunctions and articles for ministers and readers;" it is also divided into sections. The third manuscript was drawn up to shape episcopal policy, after the accession of Elizabeth.

King, Cardenio F. The light of four candles. Bost., C. F. King, Journal Building, 1908. c. 10+510 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Author is a well-known financial advertiser who here gives the history of his four years' fight with Thomas W. Lawson, giving the history of a war in finance fought in newspapers, magazines, the political arena, the markets and the courts. The methods of the promoters to sell stocks for Trinity, Nevada-Utah, Bay State Gas and other speculations are given with full names of all interested. Author claims nothing has been suppressed and that Lawson has been fought to a standstill.

Kirkup, T. A primer of Socialism. [N. Y., Macmillan,] 1908. 60 p. D. cl., *40 c. net.

The purpose of this little book is to give a clear and impartial account of socialism. It supplies in brief and simple form the information on the subject which the author has given in his article "Socialism," contributed to the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" (1887) in his "Enquiry into socialism" and in his "History of socialism." The book is mainly historical and expository, the reader being left to form his own conclusions or to pursue his inquiries as he may see fit.

Purports to be the biography of a man whom the author knew first at the University of Virginia and later at Harvard College, and who finally disappeared from America. Besides the fact that he had lost the woman he loved and was about to marry, and his solitary indulgence in strong drink, the writer learned little about him. He calls him William Wirt Dunlevy. Many of his papers are included in the volume; they are mostly studies in mental strain.

Reminiscences of the life of the art students in Paris and Barbizon forty or more years ago—their pleasures, their aims, their work—but especially telling of the friendship of the three men, Robert Louis Stevenson, his cousin, R. A. M. Stevenson, the author of "The art of Velasquez," and the author himself. Many other people of importance and later wide celebrity appear in the course of the chronicle, among them Jean François Millet, the great French painter, and Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

Lowell, Percival. Mars, as the abode of life. N. Y., Macmillan, 1908. c. 19+288 p. pls. O. cl., $2.50 net, boxed.

Professor Lowell presents new evidence regarding life in Mars gleaned from the very favorable observations made at the Lowell Observatory last year. The book is not merely an argument in favor of Professor Lowell's theory, but also outlines a new science which the author calls the science of planetology—the history of the career of a planet considered as such. Professor Lowell has pointed out that this subject bridges the evolutionary gap between the nebular hypothesis and the Darwinian theory, since it deals with the genesis and development of what we call a world. The volume is written for the general reader, the mathematical and other demonstrations of the various steps of the argument having been placed in an appendix, and the illustrations are numerous.

The professor of poetry in the University of Oxford gave this address on October 19, 1908, 200 years from the date that the first professor of poetry in the University delivered his inaugural lecture. Henry Birkland was born in 1617. For a short time he joined the Church of Rome but became later a good Anglican and Royalist. In 1638 he was elected Fellow of All Souls, where he remained for 19 years. He studied law and medicine. He died in 1696.

March, J: Lewis. A theory of mind. N. Y., Scribner, 1908. c. 6+453 p. O. cl., $2 net.

Author is a professor of Union College, Schenectady. In the theory presented he has attempted a new solution of the problems of psychology. Invoking the modern views of biology he departs from the current psychological view that the essential element in mental phenomena is thought. He begins his theory with a supposition that the elementary part of mind is the instinct. The discussion is definite throughout, and in its choice of facts and its interpretation of them is safe and conservative.

Dr. Evans is a leading authority on prehistoric Europe and has set Greek history in a new and juster perspective; Dr. Lang has enriched the science of anthropology with many original and fertile hypotheses, and has also translated Homer and vindicated his very existence; Professor Murray has reinterpreted the music of Euripides and analyzed the elemental forces combined and crystallized in the Greek epic; Principal Jevons has made brilliant suggestions on the early history of religion and edited Plutarch's "Romane questions"; Professor Myres, who teaches Greek and is a learned archaeologist, did most to organize an effective School of Anthropology in the University of Oxford; and Warde Fowler is the living embodiment of the Humaner Letters. The lectures were delivered during the Michaelmas term of 1908. The editor is secretary to the Committee for Anthropology.

Based upon public records and testimony of personal witnesses. Dwells specially upon Lee, the man and the Virginian, who, although a devoted soldier of the United States, felt it his duty to fight for his own state of Virginia. The great campaigns of the war are not discussed critically. Lee is described as the greatest character of his time; the sufferings of the South are tragically told and the magnetism of the man who inspired such enthusiasm in his followers is made clear to the reader. The author is himself the son of a Confederate general.

M. Paul-Dubois is a nephew of Taine, the historian, and the author of several important works on history and sociology. This is a translation of "L'Irlande contemporaine," published in Paris, 1907. The book is an important study of the Irish question. Starting with an historical survey, the author deals with his subject in three parts: the social and political condition of Ireland at the present day, her material decline, and her possibilities of future intellectual and material regeneration.

The editor is associate professor of romance languages, University of Kansas. This is the first appearance in an American edition of this celebrated realistic Spanish novel. The text is a careful abridgment of the bulky Madrid edition, endorsed by the author as preserving the essential facts of the narrative, and is fully equipped for school use. The introduction deals chiefly with the author—his work and personality and the sources of his inspiration—and with the political events that form an historical background for the narrative.

The first part of this work was entitled "Gillette's Social redemption." See American Catalog, 1905-'07, v. 2, 1907. It dealt with existing world-wide conditions and endeavored to show the dangerous trend of affairs. Events since have justified its prophecies. Mr. King (who by the way is the inventor of Gillette's Safety-Razors) claims that present social conditions are capable of radical improvements and that the sufferings of mankind could be eradicated by a proper social régime in which there shall be no rights without duties, and no duties without rights. He outlines a type of socialism that needs no capital and could be started by three earnest men.

In bringing out "A midsummer night's dream," the publishers have made a conscientious effort to do full justice to Rackham's work. Each illustration, of which there are forty in color and others, is mounted separately on paper specially tinted to give harmonious background for the artist's colors; the book itself is bound with a linen back and in covers of Japanese shadowed paper which was imported from Japan for this special use. The title is stamped in gold with a Rackham design. Even the temporary cover has been selected with a view to completeness of harmony and is of spider-web paper, also especially imported.

Covers fifty years of Ellen Terry's stage life, from the time when still a little child, she appeared with Charles Kean in 1848, down to her last days at the London Lyceum, and the death of Henry Irving. It is not only the story of her career, but the story of what has been accomplished in theatrical art in the last fifty years. Ellen Terry's friendships with illustrious persons were most remarkable; the details are most fascinating, as are her anecdotes and reminiscences of her contemporaries of the stage. What she has to say about Henry Irving as actor and manager is most illuminating. Profusely illustrated.

Whether this conclusion shall be reached or not by the reader will depend very largely on his point of view.

It is proposed to show that a vast amount of evidence exists which proves that throughout the geological ages up to recent time our earth was girt with belts of planetesimal or gaseous matter. The nature of the evidence demonstrates that these belts were potent factors in producing the climatic changes which marked the various geologic periods. They were the cause of the Ice ages. It is argued that since man lived at the time of the Ice age he witnessed the scenes accompanying the downfall of the zonal-belts. These so impressed him that he recorded the facts in his primitive nature-myths. Half the volume is given up to the interpretation of these echoes. While the language is scientific, the book appeals to the general reader.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 19, 1908.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

RECIPROCITY AND RETALIATION.

RECIPROCITY is the hand-shake between nations, retaliation the slap in the face or the blow between the eyes. Our copyright system, since the so-called "international copyright act of 1891," has been founded somewhat on reciprocity, the President being authorized to extend its provisions to each nation as its domestic laws make reciprocity possible. Unfortunately, the act of 1891 included a provision, "the manufacturing clause," which altogether violated the principle of reciprocity. This has become a precedent for Great Britain for introducing a similar provision into her patent law providing that patents shall be valid only when patented articles are manufactured on British territory. And now comes Mr. Stephens, of Texas, with a retaliatory bill, providing that the rights of a foreign copyright or patent proprietor in this country shall be restricted to the rights granted Americans in that country, which is a blow, not undeserved, at the new British patent amendment. In fact, it is a kind of retaliation—on the general principle of "you're another."

Now this phrase in everyday experience, however justified by facts, is not conducive to real reciprocity and friendliness. So far as it affects our copyright law its immediate result may be that Germany and France will put in force a manufacturing provision against American copyright proprietors, and thus undo much of the work accomplished in our act of 1891. There has been not only a tendency in this direction but a definite discussion of means to that end, especially in Germany, and only the match of such a bill may be necessary to rekindle the flames of controversy and opposition. As a matter of fact, such legislation is not only dangerous itself, but introduces dangerous complications into domestic law, for the reason that the right to hold or protect property becomes conditional and it will be almost impossible to sell or buy such property with certainty. The same is to be said of an additional feature of Mr. Stephens's bill, which invalidates a patent or copyright if it comes into the hands of a trust or other owner objectionable to the law.

At this season of peace and good-will, it is especially worth while to point out that the modern patent system has developed a comity of nations, and that in the Berlin copyright convention this idea has gone to the happy extreme of developing a family of nations in the shape of a world-league, throughout which copyright is to be protected by virtue of the initial act of the author in his own country. This is the model which we should keep before us in our domestic legislation for attainment when this country is ready to break down present barriers between itself and other nations. It is already a world-power, and some day it will become a member of the world-family of nations. Let us not take steps backward just now.

A REFRESHING breath of fresh air comes into the copyright field in a court decision by Judge Hazel which with remarkable common sense goes straight to the heart of copyright ownership. In his decision in the Dam case Judge Hazel has brushed aside technicalities and difficulties and has ruled vigorously that the copyright notice in a magazine covers all the contents of the magazine, and that such copyright protects the author not only against the use of the form in which he has put his work, but of the central thought or idea which is its original feature. Thus he has enjoined a play which adopts the central feature of a story, although the language and setting have been modified. This is sound justice and we trust it will continue to be good law.

A RETALIATORY COPYRIGHT AND PATENTS MEASURE.

JOHN H. STEPHENS, of Texas, in the House of Representatives, December 7, introduced the following bill, which was referred to the Committee on Patents and ordered to be printed:

60th Congress, 2d Session, H. R. 22296.

A BILL

Requiring any citizen of a foreign country who may procure a copyright or letters patent from the United States to pay to the United States for such copyright or patent the same amount of fees and to subject himself to the same laws, rules, and regulations relating to such patent, its use and control, as the government of such foreign country exacts by its laws and regulations from citizens of the United States, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) whenever any letters patent is issued by the United States on any article, commodity, compound, device, mechanical appliance, or machine protected by patent, or (b) any copyright issued by the United States on any article, musical composition, musical instrument, or device for reproducing music or musical composition, or any picture, book, pamphlet, or any other work of literature or art protected by copyright, to any citizen of any foreign country, then such patentee or copyright grantee shall pay to the United States the same amount of fees and subject himself to the identical laws, restrictions, rules, and regulations as such foreign country imposes upon a citizen of the United States for patenting or manufacturing and selling the patented article therein; and the failure on the part of the foreign patentee to comply with this law shall operate as a forfeiture and cancellation of such letters patent or copyright in the manner hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to make and carry into effect all such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to enforce the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 3. That (a) whenever any letters patent issued by the United States on any article, commodity, compound, device, mechanical appliance, or machine protected by patent, or (b) any copyright issued by the United States on any article, musical composition, musical instrument, or device for reproducing music or musical composition, or any picture, book, pamphlet, or any other work of literature or art protected by copyright is purchased from the patentee or owned, leased, used, or controlled by any individual, firm, association, syndicate, corporation, or combination which is engaged in any vocation, business, or enterprise in violation of any law of Congress or of any State prohibiting, restraining, or regulating trusts, monopolies, or combinations which operate in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, the right to any protection under the patent or copyright laws of the United States shall cease and terminate and shall subject such patent or copyright to cancellation in the manner hereinafter provided.

SEC. 4. That any citizen of the United States, or any United States district attorney for any district of the United States, may institute or cause to be instituted suits in law or in equity for the cancellation of any copyright or letters patent mentioned in this Act, when the facts shall warrant such suit or suits as provided in this Act, in any circuit court of the United States where the foreign patentee may reside or transact business, or where the patent or copyright referred to in section one of this Act is owned, leased, used, or controlled, or the articles or products referred to in section three are manufactured, used, produced, or sold in violation of this Act; and said court is hereby given full jurisdiction to try and render judgment in all such cases under this Act.

MAGAZINE STORIES PROTECTED AGAINST UNAUTHORIZED DRAMATIZATION.

DECISION IN THE "HEIR TO THE HOORAH" CASE.

We give below the full text of the decision delivered December 12 by Judge Hazel, of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, in the suit brought by the estate of Henry J. W. Dam to restrain the Kirke La Shelle Company from publicly performing the play entitled "The Heir to the Hoorah":

HAZEL, J. This suit in equity was brought to restrain the defendant, The Kirke La Shelle Company, from producing or publicly performing the dramatic play or composition entitled "The Heir to the Hoorah." The bill alleges that the play is an unauthorized dramatization of the published story entitled "The Transmogrification of Dan." It is first to be considered herein whether the story was protected by statutory copyright. Complainant's intestate, who was the author of the story, sold it to the Ess Ess Publishing Company, which later published the story with other articles in its copyrighted number of the Smart Set, issued in September, 1901. After the alleged infringement of the novelette the publishing company assigned back to the author its copyright of the September issue of the magazine, the assignment, however, simply covering and including the story or novelette in controversy, together with all claims and demands against infringers thereof. The defendant contends first that to secure a valid copyright of his authorship and the exclusive right to dramatize the author must have copyrighted the literary production, or the copyright must have been taken out by the purchaser; and, second, that there was no sale of the copyright, but simply of the manuscript or literary composition. But this contention is not thought maintainable, for by Section 4952 of the Revised Statutes of the United States not only authors have the right to translate and dramatize their literary productions, but proprietors or owners by assignment upon complying with the statute are given the exclusive right of printing and vending the same. The unconditional sale of the story entitled the purchaser to protection from piracy upon securing a statutory copyright, and moreover it could be and was in fact copyrighted by the owners thereof by simply filing with the Librarian of Congress the title-page of the magazine and complying with the provisions of the statute relating to copyrighting. It was not necessary to file a copy of the title of each article published in the magazine or of the author's literary composition, nor was it necessary that he should himself have secured the copyright so as to retain the right of dramatizing it. It was properly held in a recent case decided in this circuit by Judge Holt that an author can sell the exclusive right to print and publish his productions, the buyer thereby having the right to copyright it, though the author may withhold to himself the right to dramatize. Ford v. Blaney, 148 Fed. 642. Hence, in the present case the sale or transfer of the literary composition prior to copyrighting vested the Ess Ess Publishing Company, in the absence of any reservation, with all the rights and privileges of the author and gave it the right to secure the statutory copyright which thereafter it could assign to the author, his heirs or assigns.

The next important question relating to the dramatization of the copyrighted literary composition by the defendant without the consent of the proprietor requires us to ascertain whether the subject or so-called plot of the story or novelette was original and whether the defendant in producing the play or drama abstracted a material portion thereof. In cases of this character the inquiry must be whether the substance of the literary composition has been taken to the injury of the complainant. Of course, if the plot or the language used by the author to develop the subject of the literary composition or the combination of incidents narrated therein was not new, or if its principal feature has been previously published either in the form of a novel, story or play, the complainant would not be entitled to the relief demanded, for in such case the author merely gave a new dress or coloring to an old theme or subject. But if the copyrighted literary composition or the theme or subject thereof was dramatized by another without the consent of the author and reproduced by dialogue spoken by play actors, and scenes and incidents are introduced coupled with stage situations by which the kernel of the literary composition is emphasized, then it may be fairly supposed that the playwright in giving a public performance of the drama endeavored to reap a profit or gain out of another's industry, against which a court of equity has power to grant relief. Whether there is a substantial similarity between the copyrighted literary composition and the play performed by the defendant is a question of fact, and the court has found comparison helpful to a decision.

The expert witness for the plaintiff testifies that the theme or subject of the story is the change of the disposition and character of "Dan," the central figure, from a man of submissive temperament in his household and towards his wife and mother-in-law to a man of commanding and asserting mien upon his becoming a father. From this idea or conception the author of the literary composition by his descriptive ability and by virtue of the use of apt words has succeeded in developing different characters, causing them to perform separate functions and helping to emphasize the central idea that in "Dan" becoming a father his previous self-abnegation, his effacement or submissiveness was at an end, making it instantly warrantable on his part to peremptorily assert his rights as the father of his child and protector of his home. This subject or theme of the copyrighted story is substantially imitated in the defendant's play. No other play, drama or literary production is called to my attention, and I have examined the exhibits in evidence, from which it may be ascertained that the subject of the author's composition together with the various characters which give it prominence was not original. It is true the dialogue of the drama is not in the words of the copyrighted story, but its exact phraseology was not necessary to the adaptation of the plot or subject or the portrayal of the different characters to the play. The actors in the play "The Heir to the Hoorah" portray or imitate the characters in the copyrighted story, and in addition thereto make use of incidents and situations which apparently give expression to the central theme or purpose of the author. Whatever of addition has been introduced in the play does not obscure or emasculate the central figure of the story, namely, the rejuvenated husband. The copyrighted story was not strictly a dramatic composition, although its special features, its incidents, personages, episodes plainly indicated that it was not without dramatic interest and could by appropriate dialogue, scenes and stage business be translated or expanded into a drama. It is enough if the essence of a play is taken from an original literary production, and it is held that one or more chapters of a novel is to be regarded as a dramatic composition. Drone on Copyright, p. 589. The playwright of "The Heir to the Hoorah," as already stated, has expanded the plot of the story, using different words. He has introduced additional characters. He has cleverly staged the play and by the use of language and characters has given the subject of the story an excellent interpretation. But all this is unimportant if he has taken, as I think he has, the substance of complainant's authorship. Emerson v. Davies, 3 Story, 782; Drone on Copyright, p. 433. The playwright has testified that he did not use the plot or theme contained in the copyrighted story, but that the plot of the play was originated by him. Evidence has been introduced to show that the incidents and situations were familiarly known. But giving weight to the testimony of complainant's witness, Mrs. Norris, it would seem to be established that the playwright without first obtaining the permission of the author or proprietor plagiarized and imitated the complainant's copyrighted literary composition. The theatrical production above mentioned has been staged at great expense, and the elaborate scenery, stage effects, translation of the story into a dramatic composition, were the result of such valuable services and skill by the defendant that the court would hesitate to grant relief by injunction against the entire play were it not that the pivotal feature of the play or the objectionable parts are seemingly inseparable from the theme of the story, and therefore adopting the general rule in cases the said play or drama containing the literary matter which is the subject of this controversy must be enjoined. Probably the play or drama can be revamped to eliminate the aforesaid objectionable imitations. If such is the fact, and this may be shown on settlement of the restraining order, the injunction will simply cover such objectionable portions. Let complainant enter a decree in conformity with this decision with costs.

WINDOW DISPLAY RULING.

At the regular meeting of the board of trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held on December 8, the final report of the committee, appointed to investigate the postal ruling prohibiting window display contests for prizes, was read.

The report included a letter from Postmaster-General George von L. Meyer, written to R. W. Bainbridge, of the Manufacturers' Association, New York, whose efforts were enlisted through the Board, and who took the matter up with the Postmaster-General in connection with other things about which he had arranged to visit him. This letter states that the ruling holds as before, and as it has been defined in the WEEKLY for October 17, (page 1064.)

The following suggestion for a window dressing contest was submitted to the post office authorities by the committee for consideration. This was approved by the Post Office Department and matter concerning such a contest will be admitted to the mails, the only stipulation being that it must embrace a date on which the contest will terminate.

SUGGESTION FOR A WINDOW DRESSING CONTEST.

"Any particular effort in a certain direction, if successful, is worthy of recognition and reward. It is the purpose, therefore, of the L. E. Waterman Company, to reward any dealer, or his clerk, who, with the many articles prepared and supplied by this company for window dressing purposes, can so arrange these as to make a display that will be considered of a high enough degree of fineness to include a reproduction and description of the display in a book on this subject, to communicate to the trade in general for their information.

"To assist any dealer who cares to enlist his attention to this for the benefit of his own sales as well as the educational feature, we will supply, without charge, display signs, banners, stands and other materials such as we have prepared for this purpose.

"Photographs of the displays should be sent to us in order to make our cuts for reproduction.

"The first ten rewards will be as follows:

First.....	$25.00
Second.....	15.00
Third.....	10.00
Fourth.....	5.00
And the next six.....	4.25 pems.

"Any dealer may compete by signifying his intention to do so at any time previous to June 1st, 1909. Description of materials which we furnish sent upon request."

The report, on motion, was received and the committee discharged with thanks for the very satisfactory and full report and for the time and trouble expended in investigating the matter.

At the same meeting the following dinner committee was appointed by the president to arrange for the annual dinner: Arthur P. Jackson, chairman; Frederick P. Seymour, Robert Ansley, Harry G. Kiggins, and Henry C. Bainbridge, ex-officio.

CHEAPER BOOKS FOR THE BLIND.

WHAT is to be known as the New York system of "point" reading for the blind has been perfected by William B. Wait, principal of the New York Institute for the Blind, and B. B. Huntoon, the superintendent of the American Printing House for the Blind, at Louisville. By cheapening the cost of printing such literature the system is expected to permit many blind persons to purchase reading matter. The Sunday-school lessons in the new "point" system for the blind will be sent to press in a week, and it is expected that the entire system of religious instruction for the eighty thousand blind persons in the United States will undergo marked changes.

Hitherto, because of the raised surfaces, only one side of the paper could be used, making the cost of a book or paper for a blind reader a large item. The New York system is so arranged that both sides of the paper can be used. The embossing on one side of the page is between the lines of the embossing on the other. The cost of production will be reduced by fully 40 per cent.

A KLONDIKE BOOKSELLER.

AWAY up North in the Yukon, known as "the land of the midnight sun," in Dawson, bookselling is represented by J. Zaccarelli, who, according to the Canadian Bookseller and Stationer, has for three years successfully conducted a well-appointed book, news and stationery store in that region. Mr. Zaccarelli reports that the best-selling books during the past few months have been "The Songs of a Sourdough," "Apostles of the Great North," "The Ancient Law," "The Great Secret," "The Barrier," "The Weavers," and "The Spoilers."

THE REVISION OF THE VULGATE.

THE RIGHT REV. F. A. GASQUET, Abbot, President of the English Benedictines, has returned to Rome for his winter's work on the revision of the Vulgate. Much of the time this winter will be taken up in a thorough and systematic overhauling of the cathedral libraries of Spain and Italy. In the suppression of Italian religious houses by the laws which immediately preceded and followed the fall of the temporal power in 1870, the monasteries lost all their books; but the Cathedral Chapters managed to retain possession of their treasures, and since their libraries are seldom catalogued, and they do not themselves know the precious relics of the past that are contained in them, it is impossible to say what magnificent discoveries may not reward an exhaustive search.

The Abbot recently remarked to a visitor that there was no work so engrossing and so full of pleasant surprises as bibliography. Not long ago in an English library he himself came across a priceless tenth century Psalter, of the value of which the owners were absolutely unaware, and which has now been acquired by the British Museum for about £3000.

THE POE CENTENNIAL.

ACTIVE preparations are under way for the observance in New York City of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe on January 19.

The North Side Board of Trade will issue a commemorative pamphlet, and the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences is planning an all day programme. Its Poe centenary committee has asked the Board of Education to have readings and recitations from Poe's works in the Morris High School and in the public schools of The Bronx, and to have the public lectures on that evening devoted to Poe. It also plans to dedicate a bronze statue in Poe Park, opposite Fordham College at 11 A.M., and to hold commemorative exercises in the New York University, which is near the Fordham home of Poe, and the Aqueduct, which was his favorite walk, at 3.30 P.M.

The Authors' Club intends to hold a memorial meeting on January 28 in honor of Poe. Professor Trent, of Columbia University, will deliver an address. Friends of the United States Military Academy and admirers of Poe are joining to erect, by subscription, in the library of the academy, a memorial to Poe near the Saint-Gaudens's memorial to Whistler.

THE DARWIN CENTENARY.

NEARLY one thousand scientists, representing educational institutions all over the United States, will meet in Baltimore, Md., in Christmas week to listen to papers detailing the scientific progress of the year and to celebrate the centenary of the birth of Charles Darwin and the semi-centenary of the first publication of "The Origin of Species." They are members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the annual meeting of which will be held at Johns Hopkins University in the week of December 28. In addition, as many more scientists belonging to twenty-four separate scientific societies will meet in conjunction with the American Association to tell one another just what has been discovered since last January.

Receptions, dinners, smokers and informal meetings of many kinds are being arranged in addition to the stated programme. The Darwin celebration will occupy a whole day and evening, and will take the form of memorial addresses and lectures showing the progress that the theory of evolution has made since Charles Darwin first laid it down for the consideration of the world. Darwin was born at Shrewsbury, England, February 12, 1809, but as the American Association always holds its annual meeting during convocation week, between Christmas and New Year's, the celebration of his birth will be held then instead of on the day itself. "The Origin of Species" was published first in 1859.

STATIONERS' MID-DAY CLUB.

ON December 7 the Mid-day Dining Club, which was organized through the efforts of A. W. Rogers and Arthur Jackson, had its opening at Raub's Restaurant, 144 Fulton Street, New York City. Unfortunately, the weather was very disagreeable and the attendance suffered accordingly. However, the idea of a noonday meeting place where members of the trade can go regularly has made a strong appeal to stationery men. The association is sending out post cards on which is a view of the dining room. The meals are a la carte, at reasonable prices.

Much benefit will be derived if a sufficient number take advantage of the opportunity. It is hoped that stationers and booksellers visiting New York from other places will accept the cordial invitation extended to them.

First and Last Things, by H. G. Wells. Constable.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDWIN H. KEEN, of Eberhard Faber, died in Chicago December 7, after an illness lasting only a few days. Mr. Keen was born in Philadelphia, in 1838, and went to Chicago in 1856, where he found employment in his brother's bookstore—Keen & Lee. When the war between the states broke out he enlisted in the Federal army, and served from 1861 to 1863. In 1863 he was admitted a member of W. B. Keen, Cook & Co., at 113 State Street, then known as Booksellers' Row. Over twenty-eight years ago he started as a travelling representative for the firm of Eberhard Faber, in the Western territory of that firm, and he was finally appointed resident agent in Chicago.

HERMAN KNICKERBOCKER VIELE, civil engineer, artist and author, died on December 14 at the Hotel Le Marquis, in New York City. Mr. Viele was born in New York City January 31, 1856. He was the son of Egbert Ludovickus Viele, who was a well-known civil engineer in New York City. The younger man was in his father's office until eight years ago, when he went abroad to study literature and art. Mr. Viele's pictures were exhibited in New York and other cities. His first book, "The Inn of the Silver Moon," appeared in 1900. It was followed by "The Last of the Knickerbockers," "Myra of the Pines," and many magazine articles.

DR. AUGUSTUS LE PLONGEON, Count de Coquerville, an authority on Mexican archaeology, died on December 13, at his residence in Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. Le Plongeon was born in the Isle of Jersey in 1826. His father was a Commodore in the French navy and a member of the old French family of De Tocqueville. After attending school in France he took a course in medicine and later went to South America, where he practiced for many years. He became interested in the ancient history of the South Americans and began a series of tours with his wife over Peru, the Yucatan Peninsula and Mexico. Two books of his, "Queen Moo and the Egyptian Sphinx" and "Sacred Mysteries Among the Mayas and the Quichés," are considered as authoritative works on the peoples of Peru. Dr. Le Plongeon was a Mason and wrote a book on the subject of Masonry showing that it existed before the time of King Solomon. For the last ten years Dr. Le Plongeon has made his home in Brooklyn, where he has devoted his time to writing. He was engaged in writing a book at the time of his death. He made a number of plaster casts for the Museum of Natural History in New York City.

DONALD GRANT MITCHELL, the genial "Ik Marvel," died at his home, Edgewood, in New Haven, on December 15. Mr. Mitchell was born at Norwich, Conn., April 12, 1822, the son of a Congregational minister and the grandson of Justice Stephen Mix Mitchell, a distinguished jurist. He prepared for college in Dr. John Hall's school at Ellington, Conn., and entered Yale, from which he was graduated in 1841. Owing to ill health he went abroad in 1844, where he remained two years. On his return he published his first book, "Fresh Gleanings, or, a New Sheaf from the Old Fields of Continental Europe." For a time he took up the study of law in New York City, but ill health, in 1848, again obliged him to go abroad. He was in Paris at the time of the outbreak, his observations being embodied in his book entitled "The Battle Summer." Mr. Mitchell then definitely devoted himself to a literary career. He began the issue of The Lorgnette, or Studies of the Town, by an Opera-Goer, a weekly periodical of the style and size of Irving's "Salmagundi." The name of "John Timon" appeared in The Lorgnette, and Mr. Mitchell kept his secret nearly a year. In 1850 there appeared the extremely popular "Reveries of a Bachelor," by Ik Marvel, the first chapter of which the author had contributed to The Southern Literary Messenger, in which much of Edgar Allan Poe's work had appeared. A year later is was followed by "Dream Life," which was written in the same vein of hazy reminiscence of real life. These books have been many times reprinted, and appear to have a charm for each new generation of readers and lovers of literature. Mr. Mitchell was appointed United States Consul at Venice in 1853 by President Pierce, but he resigned in a few months and collected material for a history of the Venetian Republic, but it was never published. He used some of the facts in later writings and in a lecture before the Yale Art School on "Titian and His Times," which appeared in a later volume of miscellaneous writings, entitled "Bound Together." Mr. Mitchell returned to America in 1855, and he and his wife made their home on a large farm which he purchased about three miles from New Haven and named Edgewood. It was there that he wrote the many articles and sketches on rural life, combining practical information with literary refinement and tender sentiment, which appear in his books "My Farm at Edgewood," "Wet Days at Edgewood" and "Rural Studies, with Hints for Country Places," reissued as "Out-of-Town Places." These appeared between 1863 and 1867. "Fudge Doings," made up of papers in The Knickerbocker Magazine, also appeared in this period. The author was an occasional contributor to Harper's Magazine and The Atlantic Monthly, in which his only novel, "Dr. Johns," appeared, and to other publications. In 1868 he was editor of The Atlantic Almanac, and in 1869 was one of the editors of The Hearth and Home. He was a lecturer on literature at Yale for a number of years, and was a member of the council of the Yale Art School from its foundation. His lectures on literature and history appeared in the volumes entitled English Lands, Letters and Kings, which include "From Celt to Tudor," "From Elizabeth to Anne" and "Queen Anne and the Georges." He was also the author of "Seven Stories, with Basement and Attic," "About Old Story Tellers," "Pictures of Edgewood," "Daniel Tyler, a Memorial Volume," "The Woodbridge Record" and "American Lands and Letters."

NOTES ON AUTHORS

PRINCESS FEODORA of Schleswig-Holstein, the young sister of the German Empress, has written a story under the pen-name of F. Hugin, entitled "Through the Mist."

TWENTY thousand pounds have been given for the erection of a monument to Oscar Wilde in Père la Chaise cemetery, Paris, by a donor who desires to remain anonymous.

It is authoritatively stated that the Rev. Dr. James M. Ludlow, who retires the last of this month from the pastorate of the Munn Avenue Presbyterian Church of East Orange, N. J., after a service there of twenty-three years, is the author of "Judge West's Opinion," recently brought out by the Revells. Dr. Ludlow is well known as the author of "Captain of the Janizaries," "Deborah, a tale of the times of Judas Maccabeus," "Sir Raoul, a tale of the theft of an Empire," and "Incenives for Life."

J. T. TROWBRIDGE sailed for Naples December 5 on the steamer Romanic. It is his intention to spend the winter in southern Italy and Sicily. This is Mr. Trowbridge's third visit to Europe. He wrote "Neighbor Jackwood" in Paris in the summer and fall of 1855. In 1888 he took his family abroad and spent three years on the Continent. Mr. Trowbridge at eighty-one shows no trace of the infirmities of age, and has a new book in press, "A Pair of Madcaps," which will be published by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. April 1, 1909.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Ion is the title of a new monthly journal devoted to electronics, atonistics, ionology, radioactivity and raumchemistry, by which term the journal designates the special application of the electron theory to chemical problems. The staff of editors includes Sv. Arrhenius, Stockholm; Bertram B. Boltwood, New Haven; Md. Curie, Paris; A. S. Eve, Montreal; E. Goldstein, Berlin; O. Hahn, Berlin; Vant Hoff, Berlin; J. Joly, Dublin; W. H. Julius, Utrecht; W. Marckwald, Berlin; Stefan Meyer, Wien; A. Werner, Zurich, and Willy Wien Würzburg. Charles H. Walter, London, is the chief editor, the publication offices are located at 16 Heathfield Gardens, London W.

The Independent last week celebrated its sixtieth birthday by issuing an elaborate jubilee number, entitled "Sixty Years' Work." The number contains portraits of the founders, editors, notable contributors and editorial associates and views of the buildings occupied, facsimiles of manuscripts by Whittier, Longfellow, Bryant and others famous in the annals of American literature. The articles review the work of The Independent from several viewpoints and treat of contemporary events. The Independent has a proud record as a fearless force in social and political events of the country in trying times. We offer congratulations and hope that it may long be spared to carry on its excellent work.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

LEMCKE & BUECHNER, New York City, supply the "Literarischer Jahresbericht, begründet unter der Leitung von Detlev v. LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE CENTURY COMPANY calls attention to the fact that no sequel or continuation of "The Lady of the Decoration" has been written by Frances Little, the author of the original work, and that no such book has been authorized or published with her consent or that of her publishers.

THE TORCH PRESS, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, announces a work entitled "The Sioux Indians—a History," by Doane Robinson, Superintendent of the South Dakota Historical Society, who presents a complete record of the most powerful of all Indian races native to the American continent, from their earliest traditions and first contact with white men to their final settlement upon reservations and abandonment of tribal life. The volume is fully illustrated by portraits and maps, some of the latter being from manuscript sources.

THE London Daily Chronicle, in its issue for November 16, gave a half column review in verse of the charming collection of "Poems from Punch, 1841-1884," with introduction by Sir Francis C. Burnaud, published in this country by H. M. Caldwell & Co., (in their Remarque Series.) The review concludes with the following lines:

"A genial hotch-potch—slightly out-of-date—
But geniality never comes too late!
Hail to the veteran of the Table Round,
And his Great Whale that never could be found!
Long may it live, and long live F. C. B.,
To mix new bowls of Punch for you and me."

THE latest volume in the complete limited edition of the works of Anatole France in English is "The Well of St. Clare," published this week by John Lane Company. They have also brought out this week Robert Ross's biographical memoir of Aubrey Beardsley, which carries 16 full-page reproductions of characteristic drawings by the artists, including as frontispiece the portrait of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, now in the Berlin National Gallery; also, "The Kiss of Helen," a novel by Charles Marriott, which depicts the silent influence of a woman's love upon the professional career of a young man.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish at once a new novel by David Graham Phillips, entitled "The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig, which is about to close its serial run in The Saturday Evening Post. The scene of the story is laid in Washington, and later on in the Adirondacks. Its hero, Joshua Craig, is a young Western lawyer who is striving to make a name for himself in national politics, becomes Assistant Attorney-General, a position from which he resigns in order to run for Governor of the State of Minnesota. By those who have read the novel it is said that Mr. Phillips has taken for the original of his hero his own roommate at college, Senator Beveridge, of Indiana.

THE Dedham Transcript Printing and Publishing House, Dedham, Mass., has just ready a volume on "Dedham's Ancient Landmarks and Their National Significance," by the Rev. Edward Hunting Rudd. Dedham, ten miles from Boston, was settled in 1636 and originally named Contentment. Having been one of the first sheltering homes on American soil of a considerable number of lineal names, it is rich in Massachusetts place-material, particularly of the colonial beginning period, and Mr. Rudd's interesting work should therefore appeal to students of early American history and genealogy. The volume has an introduction by Joseph H. Soliday, of Dedham, and contains a number of illustrations.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. announce a timely work entitled "A Mystery Play in Honor of the Nativity of Our Lord," by Robert Hugh Benson. It gives the text, with illustrations, appendices, stage directions, etc., of a play which was produced at Cambridge in December of last year and in January of this year by the girls of St. Mary's Convent School, whose ages were from six to eighteen. "The Dawn of the Catholic Revival in England" is the title of another work, in two volumes, by Bernard Ward, president of St. Edmund's College, Ware, which is just ready. The historical period embraced in this work is from 1781 to 1803. There is also "A History of English Journalism to the Foundation of the Gazette," by J. B. Williams, containing a portrait of Charles II. and five facsimiles of old prints.

B. F. MAUPIN, treasurer of John Lane Company, 114 W. Thirty-second Street, New York City, has prepared a book that should interest the publishing trade, which he calls "The Publishers' Calculator," covering billing, royalty statements and inventories. The tables are guaranteed to enable the user to find instantly the cost or selling price of any number of books, at any price and at any discount; the royalty at any per cent. on any number of books sold, at any price, and the value of any number of books at any price. These are the three things that make up the mass of detail in keeping the accounts of a publishing house, and any help that will help to reduce them to a minimum should be certain of a welcome. Mr. Maupin will send sample pages of his "Calculator" on application.

"SONGS OF SUMMER" is the fifth volume recently issued by The Bobbs-Merrill Company in the Deer Creek Illustrated Edition of the works of James Whitcomb Riley. As its title indicates, it contains the poems especially devoted to the outdoor season, with which the Hoosier poet is most associated. Here are such characteristic verses as: "The Ballads of the Coming Rain," "Knee Deep in June," "Old Fashioned Roses," "The Old Swimm' Hole," "A Sudden Shower," and "Up and Down Old Brandywine." As in the case of the other Deer Creek volumes, "Songs of Summer" is elaborately illustrated by Will Vawter. As much a Hoosier as the poet himself, living, in fact, in the poet's own home town of Greenfield, working in almost daily consultation with the poet, this big, funny, whole-hearted fellow of the skilful brush is just full of the Riley spirit.

ROBERT GRAU, 240 Union Avenue, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., has written and will publish next February a work entitled "Forty Years' Observations of Music and the Drama." Mr. Grau presents biographic sketches of three hundred theatrical and operatic managers and stars, tracing their careers from their earliest beginnings and struggles to the present era of $10,000 a night audiences and $3000 a night singers. The early American tours of such great artists as Ristori, Jenny Lind, Fechter, the Pattis and others are interestingly described, as are the first appearances of Lillian Russell, William Crane and others; Colonel Fisk's toy—the Grand Opera House in New York City; the early efforts of the Frohmans, Colonel Haverly, Henry E. Abbey; the arrival of vaudeville as a substitute for variety, and other equally interesting events in the dramatic world. The edition is limited to 1000 copies, of which about forty per cent. remain unsubscribed for.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have just brought out a timely book on "Turkey and the Balkan States," by Esther Singleton, whose plan has been to picture Turkey from a variety of points of view—historically, ethnically, economically, etc.—and for this purpose nearly all the chapters are taken from the works of well-known writers, who have either travelled through Turkey and the Balkans, or who have made special studies of those countries. Beginning with Lord John Russell, who describes the fall of Constantinople, there are a dozen writers who are thus drawn upon, and the chapters contributed by them are interspersed with others by Miss Singleton herself, who provides the details needed to give the work continuity and completeness. The volume contains numerous illustrations from photographs. They will bring out shortly "The Opera-Goer's Complete Guide," translated by Richard Salinger from the German work by Dr. Leo Melitz. The volume will contain the story of every noted opera composed up to 1907, over 200 in number, each story being given act by act. The volume is intended to take the place of the ordinary libretto and will be issued in convenient form to be carried to the opera.

DUFFIELD & Co. have just ready "Letters of Mrs. James G. Blaine," edited by Harriet S. Blaine Beale. The letters were written by Mrs. Blaine for the most part to the children of the family, during the years when her husband was one of the greatest political leaders of this country and throw much new light on the fierce Presidential contests of 1876, 1880 and 1884, inasmuch as they authoritatively disclose what was in Mr. Blaine's mind while those contests were progressing. They have also just ready "Tono-Bungay," H. G. Wells's new novel. As distinguished from romances containing a fantastic element, "Tono-Bungay" is practically the third novel which Mr. Wells has produced. It is longer than anything he has yet written, and is planned on a larger scale. He has had it in hand and worked at it intermittently ever since the publication of "Kipps," in 1905. Its chief character is Edward Ponderevo, the garrulous inventor of Tono-Bungay, a patent medicine, whose career from insolvency as a chemist in a little country town to opulence as a promoter of industrial companies furnishes the main plot of the story. The book is written in a somewhat different style from that which one usually associates with Mr. Wells and harks back in many ways to the early traditions of the English novel.

ONE of Admiral Dewey's officers at Manila was Lieutenant Commander Edward L. Beach, at that time serving on the Baltimore. He was detailed afterward to Annapolis, where as discipline officer he had full opportunity to observe the habits of midshipmen for twenty-four hours of the day. Out of his experience has come his notable series of Naval Academy Stories, of which the second, "An Annapolis Youngster," has just been issued by the Penn Publishing Company. This and the preceding book, "An Annapolis Plebe," have attracted unusual attention in "the service." Admiral Dewey recently wrote to Mr. Beach:

"DEAR COMMANDER BEACH: You have written a very charming 'Annapolis Youngster,' and I feel much indebted to you for sending him to me. I am glad to see such books made, they give so good, true and interesting a picture of a midshipman's life, and prepare young lads' minds for the fascinations and worries of the four years' career, greatly to their loving naval life."

Admiral Schley is also among those who have approved the valuable record that Mr. Beach is making of midshipman life. In a letter to the author he says of "An Annapolis Youngster":

"I found this book most entertaining. While it reveals some conditions of things unknown to my time at the academy, and introduces the customs of many of the larger colleges into the class actions of this day, it is interesting to note the transition from the early to the later day. We were a unit in my day in all things relating to duty and its performance with the scrupulous regard for truth as well represented in your character of Mr. Drake. There were one or two of the Williams type also in my day, but they preceded your Mr. Williams down the same route to the home squadron. I congratulate you upon this most interesting book."

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, or those advertising anonymously, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line. All objectionable books will be excluded so far as they come under our notice.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No reduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplaced advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no account must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash.]

Write your wants plainly, and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay" book-sellers should take the usual precautions, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

AMERICAN CATALOGUE

(7th Volume) covering in a single alphabet the years 1905-06-07.
8vo, half morocco, $7.50

This new volume, together with the preceding one, covers the period from January 1, 1900, to January 1, 1908, and thus provides a complete index in two alphabets, for the past eight years—a period during which practically all books now in active demand have either been first published or were reissued. Consequently, the two form an up-to-date Finding Index of great practical value to booksellers and librarians.

IMPORTANT NEW PUBLICATIONS

The Letters of Jennie Allen

To Her Friend Miss Musgrove

By GRACE DONWORTH

With sixteen illustrations by Frederic R. Gruger. $1.50.

"What a great find! Such simplicity! Such charm! Such fun!" wrote one reader to the magazine in which some of these letters were first published. Mark Twain, speaking to the Associate Press, said of one: "Here is a letter written by a woman right out of her heart of hearts. There's no spelling that can begin with it on this planet outside of the White House."

Full of just the humor that makes you laugh while you catch your breath at the great, honest, human heart beneath it all.

A set of sixteen funny Jennie Allen post-cards, free to any address.

Corrie Who?

By MAXIMILIAN FOSTER

With illustrations by George Brehm. $1.50.

Who was she?

Mystery, love and intrigue, spun like a spider's web across the threshold of a charming old house on New York's West Side!

You read for the joy of the story and pause for delight in the telling. Only in some masterpiece of an elder day have you loved a heroine and hated her enemies as earnestly as you will in "Corrie Who?"

Fate's a Fiddler

By EDWIN GEORGE PINKHAM

With illustrations by Lester Ralph. $1.50.

"A most fascinating novel, and one that the reader with the more finely cultivated taste will appreciate."—Book News Monthly.

The Panther: A Tale of Temptation

By ANNE WARNER

Author of "Susan Clegg," "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," etc.

With illustrations by Paul K. M. Thomas. Decorated pages. $1.25.

A remarkable study of the power of thought. The reader thrills with the intimate mystery of it.

"The most puzzling book of the year; a beautiful parable."—Detroit News.

"The book has all the fascination that the veiled allegory can possess."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

I and My True Love

By H. A. MITCHELL KEAYS

Author of "The Road to Damascus," "He that Eateth Bread with Me," etc.

With illustrations by Lester Ralph. $1.50.

The old, old story with a latter-day difference,—the story of a daughter of divorce and what she learns from her father and mother.

The mother says of the daughter, "She shall have the romance that her youth has a right to"; and the daughter says of the mother, "I think she has been married enough."

Read and see what each of them does about it, and see if these are not two women between whom it might puzzle any man, young or old, to choose!

"The dramatic value of the scenes is decided; a novel one will not set down until one has finished the story of the warring temperaments."—Chicago Journal

Long Odds

By HAROLD BINDLOSS

Author of "Alton of Somasco," etc., etc.

With illustrations by Hermann C. Wall. $1.50.

"One of those rare stories that send us away in permanent possession of new facts and theories. 'Long Odds' is a story of adventure, but its picture of the enslaved degradation of the west coast of Africa is terrible in its fidelity. There are very few stories that are so striking a combination of action and sentiment, with so much force as a message from one of the darkest corners of the earth."—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Description, narration, and characterization reach a high level in this remarkable story."—Boston Herald.

Wherever books are sold . . . Small, Maynard & Company, Boston

The Poems of Madison Cawein

Definitive édition de luxe, limited, in five volumes, illustrated with photographs after paintings by Eric Pape. With an introduction by Edmund Gosse. Boxed, the set, $15.00 net.

The Coming Science

By HERWARD CARRINGTON

Author of "The Physical Phenomena of Spiritualism," etc. $1.50 net.

Psychical research is increasing in significance. A prominent member of the Society for Psychical Research calls this "the best, finest, sanest, and most telling book in defence of the subject yet penned."

Psychical Research and the Resurrection

By JAMES H. HYSLOP

Author of "Science and a Future Life," etc. $1.50 net.

"The most important critical book relating to this fascinating subject that has appeared during the present year."—Boston Advertiser.

Edgar Allan Poe

By JOHN MACY

With photogravure frontispiece. 24mo. 75 cents net.

The approaching Poe centenary makes this new Beacon Biography exceptionally timely.

The Psychology of Advertising

By WALTER DILL SCOTT

Professor of Psychology, Northwestern University.

Profusely illustrated. $2.00 net.

An indispensable business-building book. Uniform with the author's "Theory of Advertising."

The American Stage of To-day

By WALTER PRICHARD EATON

Dramatic Critic of the New York Sun. $1.50 net.

A vital treatment of the drama in a style full of humor and alertness.

The Land of Lost

By ALLEN AYRAULT GREEN

Author of "The Good Fairy and the Bunnies."

Profusely illustrated. $1.25.

The fascinating story of Dorothy's surprising adventures in the land where the lost things go.

Grandmother Goose Stories

By JOHN HOWARD JEWETT

(HANNAH WARNER)

Author of "The Bunny Stories," etc. Four volumes, profusely illustrated, each 75 cents.

"The Kittens and the Bear," "What Happened to the Little Chicks," "The Goslings' Picnic," "The Ducklings Go A-Swimming," are the titles of this lovely series.

Of particular value to kindergartners.
